

Women in Defense (WID) is an affiliate of National Defense Industrial Association (NDIA). In fact, the first WID chapter was spawned by our IA-IL NDIA Chapter and we collaborated closely. Unfortunately, the IA-IL Chapter of Women in Defense was deactivated o/a May 2016. While applying or renewing your WID membership can still be accomplished, your membership will be associated with National WID and not locally. The IA-IL Chapter of National Defense Industrial Association (NDIA) remains local and active. NDIA membership, as with WID, includes these benefits - providing a national, collaborative community of advocates promoting best practices, policy and technology for warfighters and others who ensure the safety and security of our nation. Individually, members also have the benefit of local chapter participation, allowing deeper involvement and impact through strategic networking and educational events, mentoring opportunities, scholarship programs and community service. You are encouraged to consider applying for membership in our Chapter. We welcome your participation locally.
